Immerse yourself in the rhythms and stories of Cape Town, South Africa’s oldest city. Marvel at the colorful gardens that dot the cityscape. A bustling grid of cities. Centuries-old Cape Dutch houses and inspiring landmarks, including Robben Island and St. George’s Cathedral. Across the country, from the remote prison, these prisoners helped to create a new South Africa. It produced two Nobel Peace Prize winners. Theirs is a story of inspiration, courage, and hope.

Soweto, once the main battleground in the war against apartheid. It produced two Nobel Peace Prize winners. No trip to southern Africa would be complete without a visit to Soweto. The history of Soweto is a story of resistance, of struggle, of peace. It is a story of human spirit, of human endurance.

And so, you set out on your journey, to explore and discover, to learn and to be inspired. You travel to Cape Town, the vibrant city on the southernmost tip of Africa. The story of train travel begins long before the first passenger boards the Abigail, the legendary Pullman train that brought luxury to American rail travel. Geographical distance is no barrier to the best elements of any compelling story. Your personal travel story can begin with a special moment...not our moment, your moment.

“Whether you are the author of your own travel story or the object of a narrative written by another, you are the creator of your experience,” says Abigail historian John J. T. Sherlock. “The person who makes your travel story much more than a ‘moment in time’ is you. The wonderful thing about travel is that it benefits the world, not just the traveler. Travel makes the world a smaller place, and, in the process, it makes us all better people.”

What is your travel story? What is the world looking for when you step off the train? Is it more than a series of events? Is it a way to make the world a smaller place and better for all?
